SHORT BIO

I am currently a Full Professor at the Department of Social and Political Science at Bocconi University, Milan, where I am the Director of the Covid Crisis Lab and of the Master in Data Science and Business Analytics (DSBA). I hold a Master Degree in Economics and a PhD in Quantitative Epidemiology obtained at the Department of Biological Science at Warwick University. My main research interests lie at the intersection of epidemiology, demography, behavioural sciences and public health with a special focus on infectious disease epidemiology and on the effects of control programs. In particular, I use quantitative methods to evaluate the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of alternative public health interventions, particularly immunization strategies, and to understand the mechanisms behind individuals' decisions to comply to public health measures. I have been awarded two ERC Grants on modelling infectious diseases and particularly on incorporating dynamic demographic structures and human behaviours into the epidemiological modelling framework, both in developed and developing contexts. I have been a member of the National and Regional Technical Committee for the Covid-19 pandemic emergency.
